Fund Manager Commentary:

The South African Reserve Bank cut the repo rate by 25 basis points to 6.75%, taking the prime rate to 10.25%, in a unanimous decision at its November meeting. The MPC judged that there was sufficient scope to ease the policy stance, given low underlying inflation pressure and restrictive rates weighing on growth. Governor Lesetja Kganyago noted that while inflation ticked up slightly to 3.6% in October, the increase was driven by temporary shocks and non-core items, and recent inflation data has generally come in better than expectations.

A stronger rand and lower oil price assumptions prompted modest downward revisions to the inflation outlook, with the SARB reaffirming its commitment to the 3% medium-term target. Core goods prices are benefiting from currency strength, food inflation appears to have peaked, and services inflation remains broadly stable, though housing costs warrant ongoing monitoring.

In the USA, November's economic picture was unusually opaque, as the longest U.S. government shutdown in history, which lasted 43 days from 1 October to 12 November, delayed or cancelled several key data releases. Market participants relied more heavily on private-sector indicators—including ADP payroll estimates, high-frequency spending data, and corporate reports—to fill the gaps. Against this backdrop, the Federal Reserve signalled a split view on the next policy move. Some officials, including Christopher Waller, argued that weaker labour-market signals justified a quarter-point rate cut at the upcoming December meeting, while other governors cautioned that inflation remained elevated and that premature easing could undermine Fed credibility. The November Beige Book revealed that consumer spending weakened overall, particularly among lower-income households, while higher-end retail held up, highlighting a K-shaped economy in which the upper end continues to outperform. September payrolls rose by 119,000, rebounding from a revised decline of 4,000 in August, while the unemployment rate edged up to 4.4%, its highest level in four years. Job gains were concentrated in healthcare, leisure and hospitality, and retail, whereas transportation, manufacturing, and professional services saw losses.

The fund returned an above-inflation annualised yield of 7.31% for the month compared to the current local inflation rate of 3.6%

A money market portfolio is not the same as a bank deposit account. The price is targeted at a constant value. The total return to the investor is made up of interest received and any gain or loss made on any particular instrument. In most cases the return will merely have the effect of increasing or decreasing the daily yield, but that in the case of abnormal losses it can have the effect of reducing the capital value of the portfolio. Excessive withdrawals from the portfolio may place the portfolio under liquidity pressures and in such circumstances a process of ring-fencing of withdrawal instructions and managed pay-outs over time may be followed. The yield is calculated using an annualised seven day rolling average.
